Having made a life-altering career choice which had been greatly influenced by enrolment in a grade 12 geology course, Tracy Webb earned a degree in geology and now has been teaching for more than 20 years. Tracy will give an overview of the grade 12 course offered in Nova Scotia and will present some broader perspectives of earth science from an educator's point of view. The presentations will also include a brainstorming session on how the various geoscience industries can help to support teachers and raise the profile of geology.
