Permitting and Regulations on Federal Lands

The US Bureau of Land Management in Wyoming is handling a steadily increasing work load related to energy development and implementation of the Energy Policy Act of 2005. This presentation will review a number of issues including: how BLM Wyoming is dealing with its drilling permit workload, improving efficiency in the permitting process and status of implementing the requirements of the Energy Policy Act pertaining to BLM. In addition, the presentation will also cover the key roles that land use planning plays in energy development.
